U.S. – Winter storm causes hazardous driving conditions and cancels flights at Albany International airport

The National Weather Service in New York has issued winter and ice storm warnings. Heavy snow was also possible in central New York and the Southern Tier as a storm moved up the East Coast and significant icy conditions expected. Several flights have been cancelled at Albany International Airport. These severe weather conditions will cause delays to our consignments using Albany as a transit point.

GKN Freight Services are monitoring the situation and will inform you of any further developments.
