

Information Bulletin

Weather update Europe

Heavy snowfall in Germany over the weekend continues to disrupt travel on the roads, airports and railways causing transport delays.

In Spain the situation is still very bad on most roads, especially in the north where most of GKN Freight Services' traffic flows, therefore please expect some delays.

Severe weather warnings are still in place across parts of the UK for both snow and ice, however, there are currently no airport closures and although some southern port areas are still running slow, things have improved generally.

In France the situation is back to normal in the Western region with no restrictions for trucks, across the roads and motorways. In the South East of France the roads are icy and transportation is quite difficult.

GKN Freight Services will keep you informed of any further developments. However, if you have any queries to a specific consignment please contact your local GKN Freight Services representative.

11th January 2010